5th Sunday in Lent

Readings Jeremiah 31:31-34; Psalm 51 Hebrews 5: 7-9; and John 12:20-33.

Jesus' Hour Has Come

The concept of the hour is central to John's Gospel. This is the hinge which brings everything into action and God's glory is revealed in Jesus Christ. The next two Sundays are the heart of our Lenten exercise, when we are put in touch with the saving mysteries. Jesus, that single grain of wheat, dies, is put into the ground and bears much fruit. Here is the paradoxical logic of eternal life.

In the prophet Jeremiah we read of God 's desire to make a new covenant with humanity. The old covenant made at Mt. Sinai has been broken by the people. This time God intends to write it on their hearts, as opposed to writing on stone tablets. He will be their God and they will be his people. All will know him the least to the greatest and he will forgive their iniquity and remember their sins no more.

The new covenant will be successful because of God alone. By putting it into our hearts he gives us the power to respond in his love based on grace. The forgiveness of sin through faith in Jesus who died for love of us is central to the New Testament. The Psalmist seeks mercy according to God's steadfast love. To be cleansed from sin, to be given a clean heart relies on God's gracious fidelity.

The author of Hebrews pictures Jesus as the High Priest according to the Order of Melchizedek. His loud cries and tears for us are heard because of his reverent submission. Jesus obeying freely and obeying perfectly is able to offer eternal salvation to others. It is said that he learned obedience through suffering and having been made perfect, in a human sense he is able to offer salvation to all who obey him. This is our challenge to be able to obey even in suffering and to pursue the good of others even at a personal cost. This is the self-sacrificing love that Jesus is showing us.

Unlike the synoptic gospels, the Gospel of John does not have a scene in the Garden of Gethsemane. The realization of “the hour” comes in a very public setting. A group of Greeks wish to see Jesus. The world is now coming to him. It is now time to be glorified – everything is coming together and the hour is now.

Jesus points out that “the grain must fall into the earth and die”, before it can bear much fruit. Love of life does not bring success, as we usually think, but rather hatred of life. Not that we actually hate our lives, but that we are fully committed to living our lives in Christ as opposed to the world. Seed images are common in Jesus’ teaching. They reflect self-sacrifice and a dying to self-centeredness which seems to be our natural fall back.

Jesus’ message is reinforced by the Father whose voice is mistaken by some to be thunder. God has glorified Jesus in his signs, but now will even glorify him further through his resurrection. God’s loving presence at the moment of crucifixion demands a response. Our reaction will determine individual judgement. What we always have to remember is that divine glory is an infinite exchange of love and of course by its nature is eternal. As we journey through these last weeks of Lent be open to God and his love and be prepared to respond as best we can in the moment, knowing that God can magnify our efforts in his love.

Fr. Patrick.
